Many of Mr. Grice's stories of deadly animals getting the better of people sure tested my faith in the intelligence of mankind. There's no way around it, some of the victims were laughably stupid. The author has a wonderful, playful ability to explain dangerous wildlife in layman's terms. He covers all the bases. Land, air, water, you name it, there's something out there to do you in. Mr. Grice explains the habits of canines, cats, bears, hyenas (darned right scary fellahs), sharks, fish.

Grice is in his element here reintroducing the child in all of us to the wonder that is the animal kingdom. That mythic place that as kids we were in awe of and honestly a bit wary of. It is fun to be introduced to all the various zoological realms (especially the ones we think we know) and then walked through the various dangers lurking in each of them. The feeling you are left with is a bit
