Young women and the labour market - Youth Employment Decade

Young woman and their challenges to enter in their labour market. Equality between men and women is an issue that still needs to be addressed in most countries in the world. Greater female presence in company boardrooms, wage differences and difficulties in reconciling work and family life is a situation that is changing very slowly in the most advanced societies. However, in the poorest countries, the difficulties that women must overcome, especially younger women, are still many.

into the world of work. In some, the key challenges are to lower youth unemployment and improve access to either work or study. In others, it is to raise the skills of youth and to improve access to quality jobs, often in the context of a large and growing cohort of youth entering the labour market. These challenges have become even more daunting over the past years as the global financial and

Maritime diversity: how the industry is improving for women

Change is gaining momentum: The International Maritime Organization (IMO) has picked empowering women as its theme for World Maritime Day 2019; the International Labour Office is set to hold a global sector meeting discussing opportunities for women seafarers at the end of February; and the European Union has a dedicated platform for change to promote equal opportunities in the transport sector.
