Catherine Louisa Pirkis (1841-1910) was a British author. She wrote numerous short stories and 14 novels between 1877 and 1894, and is perhaps best known today for her detective stories featuring Loveday Brooke. She moved from writing to animal charity work and, together with her husband, was one of the founders of the National Canine Defence League in 1891. Her works incl
The Experiences of Loveday Brooke, Lady Detective ...
Loveday Brooke may have been working in 1893, but she's a more realistic professional detective than the protagonists of half the detective fiction being written in 2013. The stories are a bit plodding, but the character is so well sketched that she's worth the read. A whole perspective on the Victorian 'working woman.'
