Felicity Plunkett | Australian Poetry Review
The intention behind Felicity Plunkett's Thirty Australian Poets is, I think, to showcase (an unfortunate but useful word) the work of poets who have risen to prominence recently and perhaps, also, to give critics like myself, who have a dim and fragmented perception that a poetic renaissance (largely led by women poets) is taking place, the chance to see the group in toto and make some
Dr Felicity Plunkett | New Australian poetry, contemporary ...

Felicity Plunkett is a poet and critic. She has a PhD in literature from the University of Sydney and an Excellence in Teaching Award from UNE. Her first book Vanishing Point won the Arts Queensland Thomas Shapcott Prize and was short-listed for several other awards.

Thirty Australian Poets | d/dn

The new University of Queensland Press poetry anthology, Thirty Australian Poets, is out now and features, well, thirty Australian poets. The anthology has been edited by Felicity Plunkett and while I haven't actually received my copy yet, I'm kind of thrilled to know that I'm in it and curious as to just who else is hiding away in there.
